1.6 Describe the mechanism implemented to ensure that the quality of ODL programmes matches with the quality of relevant programmes in conventional mode:

BRAOU, the first Open University of the country, was established under the Act of State legislature and later was approved by the UGC/ the then DEC. The Act and its statutes provide necessary provisions relating to design and development of various academic programs and courses as per the standards incorporated. Each program and course is developed on the recommendation of necessary committees, which were later approved by authorities like Board of studies, Academic Council, Board of Management etc, as in the case of any recognized conventional university, Apart from the procedures followed, the teaching-learning component has been meticulously developed by incorporating face-to-face counseling, issue of self-instructional learning materials in print, audio and video formats. Multimedia remote teaching-learning facilities are further introduced to reinforce the learner support services. Further, distinctive student evaluation procedures and methods have been developed on par with a conventional University. Programs and courses were updated/ revised from time to time earlier and presently done as per the guidelines issued by the UGC (ODL) regulations 2017. CIQA and other academic bodies have taken necessary steps to revise the academic programs with all necessary precautions at all levels as prescribed.

Social Relevance History is a wonderful treasure-house of information and can offer guidance for the solution to all human problems pertaining to science and art, language and literature, social and political life, philosophical speculation and economic development. History shows us the roots without uprooting the tree. A mere emotional attachment to our past can do us little good, unless it is accompanied with a sober, matured and rational assessment of the values involved. History is a path finder of man's future. It is essential that one should understand the importance of his/her own cultural and social values. We should also develop attachment towards our cultural heritage. History makes us able to understand our present culture. It expounds the culture of the present time by describing the past. It explains the origin of existing state of things, our customs, our usages, our institutions. It enables us to understand that the transformations in human history were brought about by change of habits and of innovation. One of the main motives of history teaching has been to convey to the pupils the rich heritage of the mankind. It develops an understanding of the different forces which have shaped the destiny of man and paved the way for his development in society. A large number of intellectual values accrue from the teaching of history. It sharpens memory, develops the power of reasoning, judgment and imagination. It cultivates the qualities of reading, analyzing, criticizing, and arriving at conclusions. In historical writings our past is alive and treasured in the form of chronicles, biographies, stories and other forms of literary tradition. History is important in the curriculum because it helps in the teaching of morality. Through it a child comes close to the valuable thoughts of saints, reformers, leaders, important persons and sages. The children get inspired by the life stories of these great leaders. There are other arguments that go against this notion that history gives ethical teaching. History is a study of man. It is concerned with man in time and space. It explains the present in the light of the past. Continuity and coherence are the necessary requisites of history. 12.
